Decimal tops ratings for superannuation advice

DECIMAL Software (ASX: DSX; “Decimal” or “the Company”) today announced their robo-advice platform has been rated number one for superannuation scaled advice applications in the annual Investment Trends Planning Software Benchmark Report.

The independent research firm compiles the report each year to help its clients prioritise technology and process investments.

The company’s client list includes Australia’s leading banks, investment platform providers, online brokers, margin lenders, as well as industry regulators and leading dealer groups.

Investment Trends technology analyst Ian Webster said Decimal’s partnerships with QSuper and Mercer demonstrated that enterprise grade, intra-fund advice functionality should be deployed alongside super administration platforms.

Decimal CEO Nic Pollock said the accolade was further evidence that the company was meeting the needs of industry for enterprise robo-advice solutions.

“QSuper and Mercer have both been able to realise the added benefits Decimal’s enterprise advice platform can bring to their businesses and customers, including fast implementation, ease of integration with other business systems, unlimited advice topics, scalability to meet growing demand and in-built compliance,” Mr Pollock said.
